

WILL YOU
BE MY Bridesman?

Jay,

You have been my closest and dearest friend, from the beginning (by beginning, I mean that one day you gave me that caramel apple and borrowed our internet). But really. You are the only friend I trust with my whole self, and I will treasure you forever. You are so incredibly loyal, thoughtful, honest, and warm. But more than that, you get me, and where I come from (Blandford Blvd!). You are motivated, intelligent, witty, and sarcastic, and you don't take my crap. From "Jaaafaaarrrr!" to the Sharks /NHL video games and Niggas in Paradise (and "the adventures of black boy and goth girl..." bet you don't remember that one), we have a million shared memories and laughs. You're the person I call when I have something on my mind, and I think I've been the same for you.

What I'm trying to say is that I wouldn't want anyone else but you standing beside me while I make the biggest decision of my life. I got 99 problems, but my best friend ain't one. I love you Jay, always will.

Yours,

Kaila

From the girl that brought you:

“Jay, I don't know anything!”

“I'm trying to walk home but my pants are too soft.”

“Why am I salivating so much?”

“I'll just have to stick him in a room so he gets pale and make him win the lottery”

“You don't know festal? I read. Try it sometime.”

“The unfortunate consequences of swinging your arms while walking”

“At least he's a closer...he has a future in sales”

“You were a giving tree and now you're just a stump”

“Why would I go out when I can stay home and eat penis shaped objects for dinner?”

This might be primetime for some text ignorance...”

I remember the beginning of the night...”
